

A NEW PRIMARY SCHOOL FOR ASHENGROUND?

Have your say - complete our residents' survey!

A new primary school is on the cards for Haywards Heath after lobbying from Conservative Councillors who want to ensure proper infrastructure provision in the town.

West Sussex County Council have agreed that the growing number of children in the area will need a new primary school in the coming years and will be undertaking a feasibility study.

Ashenground Councillors and campaigners think there is a case for the new school to be located here as there is currently no primary school in the ward and just one in the whole town south of the A272.

Currently, parents and children are travelling across town to other local schools which could be reduced with an Ashenground primary school.

However, we want to know what you think. Please complete our online survey to have your say:
